SYNOPSIS

Common Ground is back open after a rough first day, but the Director learns that the majority of people in Fog Hollow, a poor neighborhood, are trapped in their homes due to flooding, and badly in need of food and medical attention. Meanwhile, Pierre—who has experience dealing with the earthquake in Haiti—seems like he’s trying to take over operations. The Director, juggling available resources with safety concerns, must come up with a plan to get staff and supplies to those who need them most.
