SYNOPSIS

Pierre brings an interesting problem to the Director's attention. While he has been working hard to teach healthy food habits to the Port Douglas community, the staff has been stress-eating their way to an early grave (and Mai's home-baked treats are not helping). They've even taken to leaving doughnuts in the visitor's area and eating French fries in front of clients! Pierre wants to institute some food rules in the office—like no fried snacks, no sugary sodas, etc.—but the others are horrified at the suggestion, and Mai is more than a little offended. Can the Director find a middle ground?
