

CHECKING IN ON MY VOLUNTEERS

SOURCE
#1

I spoke with Jose Nunez. He got some cuts on his face when a window blew into his living room, but he is otherwise fine. He is eager to help in the search for Feza.

Jose is one of our best volunteers, and he lives just three blocks away. But I don't know if it's right to ask him to help us when he's hurt. What do you think?

If Jose had his cuts properly treated, and he is otherwise fine and eager to help, let him.

Kateri Hunt lives right next door to Common Ground. Except for knocking her lights out, Hurricane Dante didn't cause damage to her home.

Kateri is our newest volunteer. I don't really know what she's like in an emergency. Also I don't think she's the most organized volunteer we've had. But she really wants to help! What should I do?

Have her come in, and when the others arrive, assign an experienced volunteer to support her on the search for Feza.

Did you know that Alican Solak is Feza's cousin? Alican is doing great. As usual, he's ahead of everyone. He has a photo of Feza, and he's designing a flier to help us search. Good by me! He sent me four different designs.

Can you look at Alican's flier designs with me, Boss? We need the one in which the text and photo combine to quickly get across the most useful info.

Faith Evans lives right above her father's grocery store. It's located on Sylvan Avenue, pretty far from the Center. She says her father's grocery store is the only one open in the area today, so she has to help him out all day.

Faith is so good with kids! If Feza is stuck somewhere or injured, Faith would be the perfect person to talk to him. I think we need to convince her to help us. What do you think?

Tell her that her first duty is to her father, but once she's free and Feza is found, she can spend time with the boy.

I also spoke with Matias Kinney. He is friends with Faith and is staying in her apartment because his family's whole first-floor apartment is flooded!

I don't know Matias that well, but he's eager to help. What is a good role for him?

Matias could bring snacks from the grocery store and give them to the volunteers to give to Feza if they find him.

I spoke with Anne Griffin's grandmother. I reached her in the hospital emergency room! She's pretty angry at Anne because Anne went to the park with some friends even after she was told not to, and a tree limb fell on her! Her grandmother says she'll be okay, but it'll take a couple of days for her to heal.

I'm sorry for what happened to Anne, but she disobeyed her grandmother. When the Center's back to normal, I think I should drop her as a Task Force volunteer. What do you think?

Don't drop her, because even though she showed poor judgment at home, she has not done anything wrong as a volunteer.

Tyler Wright lives across town, by West Bridge. The city just closed down the bridge. It won't be reopened until engineers declare it is safe to cross. Tyler will have to take the long way around to get to us.

We don't have time to wait for anyone before we meet up at the Center. I want to get everyone here, decide where to search first, and then get them looking for Feza right away. What should I do about Tyler?

Tyler can best help by making sure the engineers working on the unsafe bridge know to look out for Feza.